Greg Latzka Takes South Dakota back to the farm.By Michael NeugebauerI would like to thank Greg for taking me back to the farm. I grew up about 10 miles from Greg's farm. Having lived on the farm as a young child and then selling the farm as the prices dropped in the '80's, was not uncommon. Living in Mitchell was still not close enough to the country. I worked at my uncles Dairy farm whenever I got time. It did not matter if he paid me or not. I just enjoyed viewing God's Country. I am now living in Houston, TX and miss the smell of fresh cut alfalfa in the morning or a calf's first wobbly step. This book took me back for a moment in time. I want to thank Greg once again for the beautiful book. The pictures do justice to our beautiful state and people. You can put a man in TEXAS but you can't take the South Dakotan out of him.....1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. From the PublisherThis is the first of hopefully several photo books that photojournalist Greg Latza will produce about his favorite subject, South Dakota.From the AuthorEnjoy the book! I worked for about five years to gather all the photos in this volume, and I feel strongly that this is an accurate representation of all that is happening on the present-day family farm.About the AuthorGreg Latza is a freelance photojournalist working in Sioux Falls, South Dakota. While his primary work includes assignments with the New York Times, USA Today, the Washington Post, Successful Farming, Progressive Farmer and South Dakota Magazine, he enjoyed working in the trenches with the subjects in this book to provide an accurate documentation of South Dakota's ag community. If all goes well, Greg will be working on several ideas for South Dakota related books in the future.
