A Special CollectionBy Ed BrenegarIf you love maps, exploration and Lewis Clark, you'll get lots of enjoyment out of looking at these maps, seeing what they saw, and comparing them to Google maps. It is a valuable exercise in understanding how a pre-modern, digital age would map an unknown landscape. Fascinating.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Schools need thisBy Michael SpexarthThis wonderful book reminds us all that there was life before GPS, and people really just had to stumble around before they got their geography right. There just wasn't the tech. Most important, that affected history, and critical political thinking of the times. Can you imagine Thomas Jeffersons guess about what was really the Louisiana Purchase? Just how big was America?

In competition for a mostly unclaimed continent, Spanish, English, Dutch, French and Portuguese explorers guarded their maps as state secrets, as knowledge of the landscape was the key to acquisition. Though technically innacurate and incomplete, the early maps reveal active imaginations.
