Sam Benson, Alison Bing : Lonely Planet Coastal California (Travel Guide) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Lonely Planet Coastal California (Travel Guide):

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five StarsBy LSUseful for trip to SoCal.4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. Highly useful for the most partBy CustomerThis is basically a useful guide. It needs to review and include more hotels along the Avenue of the Giants. Ditto Mendocino. The walking tour of San Francisco was great and the restaurant recommendations were spot on.2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Full of fun!By SAMCAT12With my sister now living on the west coast I see many more trips in my future. Bought this and another for a recent trip and manage to highlight many places that I will want to visit. Lonely Planet guides are great - they are usually my 'go to' series!

About the AuthorAndy is an Australian freelance writer who has prowled the globe leading the life of a vagabond. After studying archaeology and psychology, he worked in the navigation business and, for some time, in educational and community theatre before long travels eventually saw him wind up in Edinburgh, selling whisky to the Scots. Andy first became involved in writing when someone cannily contracted him to contribute to a pub guide, and his formidable research on that title broke a man but launched a career. He has since written or worked on nearly fifty guidebooks for Lonely Planet (especially in Scotland, Finland, and Latin America) and other publishing companies, and has published articles on subjects as diverse as wine, rocket launches and Shakespeare for a variety of newspapers, magazines, and websites. Andy moved to Northern Spain a decade ago and lives in a place where the climate is described as enine months of winter, three months of hell'. Still, it's one of his favourite parts of the world. When he's not off with a backpack in some far-flung corner of the world, he can probably be found watching the tragically poor local football side or tasting local wines after a long walk in the nearby mountains.
