years of walking but there were many new to us. This is a great present for anyone new to San Diego. The routes are thoroughly described, comments are funny and useful and the number of hikes is amazing. Great job!Patrick Riley0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. ShivelyOutdoors San Diego: Hiking, Biking and Camping 2004Tom Leech and Jack Farnan's crisp, clean descriptions of our region's out-of-doors is an excellent reference book. It's all there: maps, history, descriptions, photos, graphics and regional resources all wrapped up in a new spiral-bound notebook about San Diego's spectacular outdoor places.The authors provide enlightening details on hundreds of sites including up-to-date tips on hiking, biking and camping in popular as well as lesser known destinations. The layout is divided into five major eco-regions: coastal, urban, inland, mountain and the backcountry. Each section is laid out in a consistent pattern for easy referencing. I believe they have left no stone unturned in the entire county!I was particularly impressed by the inclusion of historical sites such as the old missions and battlegrounds. Regional events and other unique features of each place are highlighted. The section on Special Outdoor Adventures has great tips for accomodating those with special needs. Areas which welcome household pets are listed as well.The book makes a great gift, can be included in visitors packets or given to friends who need encouragement to explore our bountiful, spectacular, bio-diverse county. Ellen Shively, Outdoors leader and Conservation Chair, San Diego Chapter, Sierra Club.
