Fine Edge : Pacific Coast, South, Fort Bragg to San Diego - Folded before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Pacific Coast, South, Fort Bragg to San Diego - Folded:

Plot your own itinerary and prepare for your trip of a lifetime, up or down the Pacific Coast! Plan your trip or just hang them up in your office or den. The Pacific Coast Route Planning Maps are a new concept to allow a birds eye view of a large area of coast line in one view. Includes over 500 places to tie up and anchor with three of our Proven Cruising Routes (c) - Offshore, Express and our "one foot on the beach", harbor hopping inshore route. All major place names are alphabetically indexed on the southern and northern portions of this FULL COLOR two-map series. Descriptions include geographical locations, nautical chart numbers, and nearly 6,000 GPS waypoints. This will help you locate all the named places, as well as hundreds of other coves on each map. The folded map is accordion folded to 12" x 5" and extends to 24" x 65". It comes in a color-printed storage jacket that features distance tables.

"A great compliment to the Exploring the Pacific Coast book." "Wow - the back includes all of the main harbor diagrams!" --Comments from customers at Seattle Boat Show
About the Author Don Douglass and Ranne Hemingway-Douglass have logged more than 170,000 cruising miles over the past 30 years - from South America to Dutch Harbor in the Aleutians. They consider Alaskan waters as some of the finest in the world and they spend their summers on their research vessel, Baidarka. Don, who began exploring Northwest waters in 1949 as a youth, has sailed the Inside Passage on everything from a 26-foot pleasurecraft and commercial fishing boats to a Coast Guard icebreaker. He holds a BSEE degree from California State University and a Masters in Business Economics from Claremont Graduate University. Don holds honorary membership in the International Association of Cape Horners and, as a founding father of the International Bicycling Association, was selected to the Mountain Biking Hall of Fame. Ranne Hemingway-Douglass holds a BA degree in French from Pomona College. She attended Claremont Graduate University and the University of Grenoble, France. Her classic, Cape Horn: One Man's Dream, One Woman's Nightmare, describes pitchpoling in the Great Southern Ocean. She is the first woman to have bicycled across Tierra del Fuego. Together, the Douglasses have documented over 8,000 anchor sites between Mexico and the Gulf of Alaska, and their six highly acclaimed "Exploring" series guidebooks, published by FineEdge.com, and their cruising planning maps cover the waters from the Baja California to the Gulf of Alaska.
