Gina Reichart, Nina Bianchi : People's Guide to Detroit before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised People's Guide to Detroit:

A Peoples Guide to Detroit is a unique collection of places to visit based on individual experiences of residents of Detroit. Fully illustrated and with reviews teeming with personality, this accessible book explores Detroit's fascinating and non-touristic destinations, which makes it perfect for those looking for a local's perspective of traveling through Detroit or searching for hidden gems in the city.

About the Author Born in Ohio, Gina Reichert holds Master of Architecture degrees from both Cranbrook Academy of Art and Tulane University and has worked for architecture firms in New Orleans, New York and Detroit. In 2007 she founded the experimental design and architecture practice Design 99 in Detroit. Nina Bianchi is an interdisciplinary designer practicing in Detroit since 2000. She teaches Graphic Design at the College for Creative Studies, is a member of the Detroit Digital Justice Coalition, and the newly founded Detroit hackerspace, OmniCorpDetroit.
